Truffles' secret: Peanut butter

By now, my love of chocolate and peanut butter combined is well-established. Butterfingers, Reese's Cups, really even just a big ol' spoon of peanut butter paired with a square of dark chocolate will do in a pinch.

During the holidays, my favorite thing to make are Buckeyes, those peanut butter balls dipped in chocolate like a homemade Reese's Cup.

Well, last week the folks at Jer's Handmade Chocolates sent over a box of three chocolate truffle-like confections and asked me to give them a whirl for the blog. Sure, I thought. Why not?

I bit into one and whattaya know? Kind of like a Buckeye because they've got that peanut butter-based center, but kicked up a notch or two or 10. Soooooo delicious and creamy.

These are made with natural peanut butter and various add-ins, like the Pretzo Chang-O's center with pretzel bits and chocolate. The Toffee Break has, you guessed it, toffee bits. Holy Yum!

Seriously, these are really worth the indulgence. They're easy to order from the Web site, and last I checked my calendar, Easter will be here before we know it....I hope my husband is reading this. (Hint, hint.)

Sounds yummy, but REALLY now...have you ever met a truffle you didn't like; I don't believe I have ;-)
